SATURDAY EVENING, NOV. 25, 1843.

BRITISH GOLD.

When pushed to the wall, and maddened to the last degree by the success of his opponents, the favorite phrase with which the editor of the Globe seeks to discharge his bile, is "the influence of British gold." No one, perhaps, ought to be better acquainted with the potentiality of gold than he who has drawn it so largely from the Treasury, nor ought we to be surprised that it should occupy so much of his thoughts at the very period when he is hoping to be restored to his pristine glory as printer to Congress. The Globe has certainly been severely tasked for the last two or three years. Required, from its position, to furnish all the raw material of slang and misrepresentation which is industriously worked up by the small village presses throughout the country—to nurse the wrath of its party, and keep it warm—to beat for recruits and watch for deserters—to soothe the angry discontents of ambitious Democrats, and pamper the ignorant prejudices of the vulgar, (no wonder it flagged somewhat during the hot summer months) and all this, while it was annually disgorging five or six thousand dollars of its Treasury spoils! A hard task indeed; and if its party, after all, shall decide that the Expositor is the better Democrat, we shall not blame the Globe for retiring in disgust.

But we took up the pen for the purpose of remarking upon the last resort of the Globe, in the way of hatred and denunciation of the Whigs. As old Petrikin used to say, "we object to it." Even the harmless pleasantness of coon-skins and hickory poles, when urged too far, in moments of exultation, are apt enough provocatives to stir up ill will among citizens of a common country. If the editor of the Globe is determined, however, to raise the cry of "British gold," and put it, as a passé-partout with which to unlock the worst passions of the people, into the hands of its numerous copyists throughout the country, why, then, we say, upon the Globe be the consequences of the ill blood and inflamed passions of the approaching campaign. We can deal in harsh epithets, and perhaps do so too much. We call Mr. Tyler a traitor—to his party—and the language is severe, but it conveys a bitter truth; not so this charge of the editor of the Globe, when, by ingeniously coupling the circumstances of Abbot Lawrence's visit to England, and the selection of John Davis to view the Illinois improvements, he seeks to distort those facts so as to serve the worst purposes of political malvolence. The editor of the Globe dare not go into the street and say to the humblest Whig voter he may meet, "sir, you are the bribed recipient of British gold"—we say dare not, for the least he could expect would be to get knocked to the ground for the calumny; yet he quietly sits down in his editorial chair, and libels the entire Whig party in language which he would fear to apply to any one member of it. This is rank cowardice.

Let it not be supposed that in condemning the use of this miserable catchpenny slang about British gold, we have any fears that it may operate to the injury of the Whig party. Not at all. On the contrary, in this particular case we think the Globe has been unfortunate in its allusion. Who first sought after this British gold? Was it not that very excellent Democrat, Governor Reynolds, who went to England and borrowed it? And now, all that the lenders have done is to send an honest Whig to see if they can safely lead the Democrat any more. Is it not so? Again, if British gold is really of such wonderful efficacy in American elections, why was it not used, and unsparingly too, in the recent canvass in Mississippi, where, to the eternal shame of all parties in this country, the repudiators have just achieved a most disgraceful triumph? If the question about British gold is to be invincibly gone into, it will be found that three-fourths, if not more, of the debts due from the several States to foreign capitalists were incurred by those States during the ascendancy of the "self-styled Democracy," who, we are sorry to say, have shown themselves far more ready to receive "British gold" than to return it.

THE SPECTATOR of this morning announces that it will commence on Monday the publication of a daily paper, at the low price of five dollars per annum, invariably in advance. Those to whom the weekly is now sent are earnestly called on to co-operate in extending the circulation of the daily.

ROBT. Y. CONRAD, ESQ.

This gentleman, in declining a re-election to the Senate of Virginia from the Frederick district, has published an excellent address in the Winchester Republican, of which we copy the concluding portion. We cannot but feel regret, that any one entertaining such sound opinions as Mr. C., and knowing how to express them so well, should feel compelled by any consideration to withdraw from the public councils.

If by Democracy is meant a devotion to our Republican institutions, resting upon the consent of the people, and receiving all their vital action from the will of the majority, show me a native born American who can help being a Democrat: born and nurtured in that atmosphere, he knows no other and can prefer no other. But law and order; protection to persons and property; and patriotism, or the love of our own country above all others, are equally a part of our creed. Wherein does a single Whig measure conflict with democracy? Is it democratic to throw ourselves at the feet of the merchants and manufacturers of England and France, the cotton growers of Carolina, or the importers of New York, and say to them, do with us as you will? Is it democratic to deny to our own representatives in Congress the power to regulate the currency and commerce, without which the several States will have less intercourse with each other than with foreign countries? Is it democratic to leave the public lands a subject for political bribery and rapine, whilst the States to whom they belong need them, to save us all from the disgrace of repudiation, to educate the rising generation, make us good roads and canals? Is it democratic to sustain and foster the overgrown power of our Federal Executive? Or is it democratic to refuse to men of small capital the right of uniting their means, that they may engage in enterprises which, without this privilege, would be monopolized by the men of great wealth? Whig principles must prevail. To doubt it would be to give up the great question of Republican Government. For a time, selfish politicians and selfish principles have place, for the people are not always awake; but when the misrule becomes apparent, they arouse themselves. Already we behold that great party, which never permits itself to be aroused but when the Republic is in danger, moving with even stronger power and will than in 1840. The people of the country are again coming to the rescue of their own institutions, and the victory of 1844 is already won.

ROBT. Y. CONRAD.

WINCHESTER, Nov. 22, 1843.

MISSISSIPPI LADIES AND REPUDIATION.

Not long since a proposition was made by some ladies in Pennsylvania to pay the debt of that State by throwing their plate and jewelry into a common stock for this purpose. It will be seen, by the following portion of an address published by some ladies in Mississippi, that they too emulate this noble example:

"But if the men will not do this duty, the women will. Yes—regard it not as an idle vision, for it will be done. As sure as in the coming election repudiation triumphs, the women of Mississippi are prepared to form societies to work, to contribute, till enough shall be raised, with the help which every God-serving man would give them, to pay the bonds, which else would rest like a burthen upon the fame and prosperity of the country. They are sincere; and let no one jest at this, for it can and will be done, even if they have to sacrifice their wedding rings, as did the women of Poland, for the benefit of their country. The first eight verses of chapter twenty-nine of Ecclesiastes are apposite to this subjects."

Calhoun stock is certainly on the rise. A new paper, to be called the Statesman, is about to be issued in New York city, where the shrewdness of business men is proverbial. In New York politics is a business, a regular trade, subject to all the mutations of any other occupation, and the evidence of an improvement in Mr. Calhoun's prospects may be seen in this new enterprise which is obviously designed to take advantage of the rising market.

There was a Whig Meeting at Fairfax Court House last Monday, for making arrangements to prosecute the campaign with vigor.

Bladen, the famous rogue, whose exploits in his vocation have been recently detailed, has been tried before the Criminal Court for Alexandria county, and found guilty on three indictments—two for burglary and one for larceny. Bladen will, therefore, have quite a time to serve in the District Penitentiary; besides, probably, a term in the Maryland Penitentiary, afterwards, for robbing in Bladensburg.

The Whigs of Indiana intend holding a State Convention for the purpose of appointing Presidential Electors, at Indianapolis on the 16th January next. On the following day the Whig Young Men of the State will hold a convention and perfect a thorough organization.

The Speakership.—The names of a number of gentlemen have been mentioned in connexion with the Speakership. Among them we notice Messrs. Beardsley, of New York, C. J. Ingersoll and Wilkins, of Pennsylvania, Dromgoole and Jones of Virginia, Campbell, of South Carolina, Lewis, of Alabama, A. V. Brown, of Tennessee, and Davis, of Indiana.—Spectator.

More Tylerism.—It is stated in the Burlington Hawk Eye, that O. H. W. Stull, Esq., Secretary of the Territory of Iowa, has been removed from office. The only cause which can be assigned for his removal is, that Mr. Stull was heard, by some of Tyler's minions, to declare himself to be "every inch a Whig." We regret exceedingly the removal of Mr. S., knowing him, as we do, to be a man of worth and ability. As to the source of the removal, we have long since ceased to regard it with any other feeling, than that of contempt.—Hag. Torch Light.

The Plebian calls Mr. Van Buren "a tried man." Yes he has been tried and convicted. He will be executed in '44, if his friends are foolish enough to put his neck in the Presidential noose.—Rochester Democrat.

BY THIS MORNING'S MAIL.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTIONS.

SECOND TRIALS.

The result in the Lincoln and Oxford district are particularly gratifying. At the moment we write this, it is rendered nearly certain that Mr. Morse is elected! The very large gain which he has made, a good deal exceeding two thousand votes, is a fine tribute to his merits, and a just rebuke by the people themselves upon intrigues, by which that district was carried into its monstrous shape. We have taken out the teeth and the claws of the Gerrymander, which was intended to ride rampant over the Whigs of Lincoln county, and we have now harnessed the monster to our own triumphant car. If the signers of the Bond do not like the way he goes, they need not blame us. So may it always be. These results mean more than meets the eye. They show that the spell of Locofocoism in Maine is broken, and broken, as we believe, for ever. If all the tyranny of last winter's legislation, and all the huckstering of last summer's bargains and jobbing cannot save the strength of the party, it is gone never to return.

In the Waldo district, it does not appear that the Whigs came into the field at all. Seeing that the junto were going to defeat themselves in that quarter, the Whigs stood and looked on. Now is the time to rally.

In the Eastern district, Mr. Cary seems likely to be chosen, and that too by a minority of his own party. The dissatisfaction with his nomination is deep and strong among his own associates, and his election will not mend the matter a whit. We much regret that the Whigs did not more effectually avail themselves of this excellent chance to secure a victory. The famous old Hancock and Washington district might have been carried as gloriously as it was in 1837. However, we have much encouragement even there. Mr. Robinson has made a large gain, and stands well commended before the people of his district, and of the whole State.

These revolutions will not go backwards! Portland Ado.

LOCAL NEWS.

CRIMINAL COURT.

At the opening of the Court this morning, to hear the motion for a new trial in the case of the United States vs. Elizabeth Hall and Emma Reed, found guilty of an assault and battery with intent to kill, the District Attorney moved to set aside the affidavits put in by the defence on the ground of their irrelevancy. This motion was argued at length by the District Attorney in behalf of the prosecution, and responded to by Messrs. Hoban and Brent for the defence. When our paper went to press, Walter Jones, Esq., had taken up the arguments for the defence, and there is little probability of any decision of the motion to-day.
